	Which selection from the section "Collaboration and resistance" explains that colonized cultures responded differently to imperialism?	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> A. The Europeans, Americans, and Japanese clearly had lopsided advantages in technology. Even so, it would have been extremely difficult for them to rule over so many people, across such a vast stretch of territory. B. Some of the colonized peoples participated in the colonial government. They did so for opportunities to advance within British society. C. European powers also exploited conflicts that already existed in a territory. They also used their technological superiority to make them worse. For example, the British were able to do this quite successfully in their rule of India. D. Therefore, the question remains as to how the colonized people resisted these imperial powers. There is no simple answer to this question. It depends on the location and time period of colonization.
